The aesthetic lexicon of architecture and design has broadened greatly in the last century, and the A+D permanent collection reflects the vast scope of this avant-garde thinking. Architecture & Design Society members experience these ideologies firsthand through our exhibitions, publications, and lectures.

The Art Institute of Chicago

SINCE 1981, the Architecture & Design Society has served as the auxiliary group for the Art Institute of Chicago's Department of Architecture and Design. The society's mission is to create a general awareness of, and positive sensitivity to, architecture and design on a local, national, and international basis. The society also promotes the activities of the Department of Architecture and Design with fiscal support for acquisitions, exhibitions, publications, and public programs. Its exciting biennial benefit, the Modern Ball, generates substantial contributions to the Department that help fulfill these goals.

Through the Architecture & Design Society's programming, emerging as well as world-renowned architects, designers, and scholars are brought to Chicago to participate in lectures and symposia that foster robust dialogue regarding all design disciplines. Please see the society's website for a list of past speakers—www.archdesignsociety.org.

MEMBERSHIP is open to the public, including architects, designers, professionals in fields related to the built and designed environments, and individuals with a general interest in these fields.

UPPER LEVEL SOCIETY MEMBERS are invited to post-lecture receptions with select speakers and are also able to enjoy limited-access tours of local interest, including private residences, studio spaces, corporate offices, and sustainable “green” environments. These experiences provide unique opportunities to engage leading professionals in various design disciplines.

AS A MEMBER of the Architecture & Design Society you help to support the ongoing work of the Department of Architecture and Design. By joining today, you can take advantage of unique membership benefits such as invitations to lectures, tours, exhibition openings, priority reservations, and free admission to A&D Society events.
