Exhibition of the Work of CHARLES FOLLEN McKIM
ARCHITECT

THE ART INSTITUTE OF CHICAGO

JANUARY 18 TO FEBRUARY 6, 1910
CHARLES FOLLEN McKIM was born in Chester County, Pa., in 1847, and died at St. James, Long Island, September 14, 1909.
The drawings and photographs included in this exhibition were selected by Messrs. McKim, Mead & White, of New York, and hung in the "Octagon," the home of the American Institute of Architects in Washington, as a memorial to Mr. Charles Follen McKim, when the gold medal awarded shortly before Mr. McKim’s death, was accepted by his partner, Mr. Mead.

At the close of the Washington exhibition, the drawings were generously lent to the Art Institute.

The Agricultural Building and New York State Building, at the World’s Fair, the Lathrop house on Bellevue Place, and the Patterson house on Burton Place, are Chicago’s only examples of the firm’s work.

"The quality of Mr. McKim’s work combined to an unusual degree scholarly correctness and profound artistic feeling, with the result that his work reverently following classical models, was yet imbued with the individuality inseparable from the best architecture.

His whole influence ran counter to that striving for novelty and ostentation, which in a new and rich country most imperils the right development of its architecture, and acted as a constant stimulus to restraint, refinement and the study of classical models.

Moreover, he showed that unselfish devotion to the advancement of his art which is the final evidence of true greatness. His influence thus exerted throughout the whole field of the arts, has been potent in the development of culture in this country.

"For these reasons there justly came to him honors, both academic and professional, in greater measure than to any other American architect."
