October 27th, 1906.

My dear Mr. Burnham:—

Will you permit me to make a suggestion, which I dare say has occurred to you, in reference to Greater and MoreBeautiful Chicago, which you have now launched out upon, and that is the widening of Michigan Avenue between Randolph and Twelfth Streets.

I am aware that this is a mere "drop in the bucket", but I think that if the Park Commissioners who control the boulevard between these points would widen the street and make a narrow parkway in the center, planted with shrubbery, they would not only make the street more attractive, but they would also make it very much easier to handle the traffic. The traffic on Michigan Avenue between Randolph and Jackson Boulevard is very heavy indeed, and is at times very badly congested.

Yours very truly,

Mr. D. H. Burnham,

Railway Exchange,

Chicago.
